Weymouth it was just simply election day; we no longer tulx up election with town meeting.

In the sia precincia about town the voting began at 6 o'clock in the morning and continued until 1.30 in the infermon, when the polls were closed and the counting began.

Counting of the ballots was writched with much interest and chapters might be written on votes and voters.

Complete returns were not looked for mutil evening and listerested around in every direction, at the same porties gathered at the fown offices where the town clerk and regisfrars were in season to receive and talmiate the returns. The box from Precinct i was the first to cross the line and after it there was quite a breathing spell until Precinct 4 and 5 came in and they were shortly followed by Precinct 5. The question of who was elected by this time was practically decided, nut many of the waiting once left for their homes, but the officers and a few with ne, he suffied his gaze was dragged wearily on while Precinct 2 was waited for; at last it enne. There is an impression abroad that the modern horse show is primarily a society function, a sort of parade ground where well gowned women may display the bert Cortis: the butcher, W. B. Hasha; the middle women may display the latest Parlisian creations to advantage. It is true that horse shows are very attracted the members of the annart set, but society is not thus whole thing, as the show itself is igseful and beneficial to the general welfare of the horse. A glance will self if igseful and beneficial to the general welfare of the horse. MACHINATIONS OF BOBS

Dy LOUISE LAMPRAY

Chappeight, 1902, by the ... S. S. MctTute Company

"Why, I don't know, Robby. What would you like to name him?" From under her flung gray parasol Fairfax Hrowne regarded her son with a look grave in its perplexity. Bobs adored like pretty modifier because she never laughed at thing also because she never laughed at thing also because she had big thue eyes and a mass of duffy red gold hair precisely like a princess in a fairy rule. Therefore, as a matter of course, the perpet and sail berteawas brought in lepter and sail berteawas brought in lepter and sail berteawas brought in her to be christened. "Tall him Hags," suggested Unphilit Prederick Lawton, the muy officer, who chanced that morning to be attendant. This had happened so often af late that dowagers were legiming to suggest in penetraling underlones that if dear Mrs. Browne were really thinking of marrying again she could not do belier than to take Unphilit Lawton, sulfaide in age, good looking and quite independent of his profession. And every one knew that Mrs. Browne had but little besides that ramshacke old plantation in Loustaga, or was it Maryland?

Bobs had overboard one or two of these suggestions and, revolving them in his seven-year-old brain, had come to the conclusion that something pertenting edse maile him regard Capitalia. Lawton's auggestion with vague disfavor.

"I don't like that," he said shortly.

"I don't like that," he said shortly, "It might seem disrespectful, you know."

He turned a stardy blue back on them and tradged off, with the meek terrier under his arm. Presently came in sight's fresh faced young subaliera. "Hello, Bobs! Where are you going with-what's his name?"

"He hasn't got ony yet," sah! Bobig soherly. "That oil Captain Lawton said to call him lags, but I shan't. How would be feel if his father had named him lags, and I like to know?"

"That is o question which Captain Lawton has probably never considered," answered Plarterle gravely. "That you might call this like begar after General Kilchener."

"Is theneral Kilchener a greet soldier?"

"The greatest next to Italis," averred the limitenon!. And that settled it. Henceforth it was Robs and Kilchener to all the American colony.

Mennwhile, as the gossips hod surmised, Boha' mather was pandering in the remole depths of her subconciousoes the question of accepting Captain Lawton. There were threa when she felt o longing for the home and position which he could give her. It would be home for Bobby, too—Bob hy, who looked at her with his big, honest, aderlag gray eyes, so like his father's. The LocHer Match.

It is to Mr. Isaac thicken, member of parliament, that we owe the invention of the ineffer match. This discovery was, to himself has told us, the result of a happy tomain. In the morning I cased to get up at I o'clock in order to pursue my similes, and I used at that these the filler and sheet, the use of which I found in very great inconvenience. Df course I knew, as adher chemists did, the explosive material that was necessary in order to prosince instantaneous light, but it was very difficult in obtain a light on woad by that explosive material, and the blea securred to the to put suphar outer the explosive material, and the blea securred to the top uit suphar outer the explosive material, and the blea securred to the top uit suphar outer the explosive material. I did that and showed II in my next betture on chemistry, a currie of which I was delivering at a large madenay.

"There was," indeed Mr. Holden, "a young man in the room whose father was a chemist in Landon, and he had mediately write to his failer about I, and shortly afterward inelfer matches were issued to the world. I believe that was the first consion that we had the present inelfer match. I was arged to go and take out a patent, otherwise I have not choult it would have been very profitable." that." "Pook! Sho wouldn't mint," said Bobby superbly. "She'd like you any amount better than that ohl may captain. My father was a cay'iry off-cer, and his sword's hunght up in the libe'y at home. I'm gob' to wear it when I grow up, but I won't be in the may. A man's no good loss he can ride." Bobby's tone was that of long setlled convicting, and in his heart t'harterls, subaliern of hussars, with a saedal won in Africa, may have agreed with him. At any rate, when he made a third that day in a group otherwise consisting of Mrs. Browne and Captain Jayton tine latter inwardly cursed line inclusion of the subaltern to talk inforces country hunts in England. No man familiar with our career can say that we have gone granulag for yieline. On the contrary, it is a well known fact that we have often been charged with a lack of Industry in this respect. Had wu set out to make a record the list would now number fifty instead of fourteen. We had nothing of the sort in view. On the contrary, it was desired was to be let alone. We may anculion in this connection as un evidence of our dislike to shed blood that our esteemed contemporary has shot at us at least 500 times in the hast fay pears and that on each and every occasion we could have cut short his career, but he is ulive and well today. The gentlemen whose gravestones ure marked Nos. 7, 8, 9 and 10, respectively, were of no particular renown and ly, were of no particular renown and were not greatly missed by the public when they had been laid to rest. SATURDAY, APRIL 4, 1903,

Four men were seated round a meth eaten green laise tabin when the Kid flung lids long legs over the window all! and sat there nonchainathy kicking his beels against the rough walls of the cabin. It was the most serious mannent of the Kid's lite, not eacepting the one in which his father had sent lim weat in disgrace. To go west—that had been something to look forward to; but to be sent linek enat again in a worse state of disgrace than ever!

That was what they were planning to do those four men around that little table, in the midst of which hurned a sinelly kerosene lamp. They were passing sentence upon Juck Farley, the Kid of the party, and ha knew that the verdict would be "Guilty!"

Collin Cutter was the first to speak. Like the others, he was a college herd man, who lind guine west for pleasance and stayed there for eachtemant. Ha was a physical ginat. There were vague rumors that once, when ha hed caught a little Masicas cheating at eards and the latter had drawn a shining machete, Cutter had hald him ha his powerful arms and bent him backward until he had broken his spinal, column. But these were only rumors. At any rate, Cutler had never shown the white feather, and he was meretiess to those who did.

The others of the group wers Addia Easton, who had been center rush and "strong man" of his class at Harvard; Keen Taylor, the marksman from Boath Carolius, where shooting is a flace art, and lial Farley, tha eider brother of tha Kid, as hrava, as cool a fallow na aver sought his fortune in the west.

M. Sarcey was not one time very shortsighted, but n successful quaration made him long sighted to an extraordinary degree. Tids restoration of his sight was not altogether an unmixed ideasing. For the tirst time sheet his childhood he could see things at a distance. His house, that he thought so fine, was found to be neglected said dirly; his precious cidin was chipped and cracked; his books were solled and torn. But the crowing blow came when a grand hundren was given to celabrate the restoration of the critic's sight. Women were invited in great number and came in their very beat. The Comedie Francisc, the Vandeville, the Odeon, were represented by their fairest ones, and the table "was a sight for the gode"—at heast Sarcey would have thought so six weeks before. But very soon his rountenance fell, and I saw his eye wandering about he astonishment—aye. In distress, He laughed no more untilooked misorable. After the caffee he made a sign to made and I followed him upstairs, believing him to have been disturded by the thought of same work which might to be done at once. But he threw himself havily on the soft, which grenued an if sharing its master's despuir, and exciaimed piteously: "Gosal heavens why, they are all frights! A New Way With Stance is Fields.
A writer in Farm and Firealde says it was his habit to remove each year from the fields the fresh crop of stones turned up by the plow. But he became satisfied that he was injuring the land thus treated. All soil was originally disintegrated rock, and the disolving process is still going alawly on wherever alone comes in contact with the elements. Thus by the constant removal of all stone was ner robbing the soil of un inconsiderable mount of fertility, besides depriving it of the heating influence and mechanical loosening effect afforded by atons or gravel in the soil. After giving the matter though the writer adopted the plan of breaking with a stone hummer on their native soil, just where left by illiage, all fial and other stann found in be antitive soil, just where left by illiage, all faund that much the greater part of the stone could be thus broken in pieces small euough to give ne further trouble even quicker and with less inborthan they could be loaded for healing.

"I'm a reporter," said Wickham. "Bo I thought."
"Then you have guessed what I wint to see yan alout?" a fairly good diplamatic stroke, considering how hard It was for Wickiam to keep his mild from windering to the

Mr. Spragge amiled oddly. 'Oh, I dou't knew about 'guessed.' Suppose don't knew about 'guessel.' Suppose we go up te my room."

As they walked up one flight of carpeted stulrs together he tried to guess Spragge's age, and that pussied him. He studied the red and brown checks and neck, and they pussied him, too, for he thought an occult person should look much less like an eater of thick beefsteaks.

Allbough this remark did not neces-sarily limity preternatural intuition, Wickiann began to feel a little ercepy.

"I suppose you—you travel for pleas-ure."

By this time they were entering the Englishman's room, on the second floor. "Yes," he said; "I do-that and other things." Then, closing the door behind him, ha added, "And perhaps Spragge la not my only name."

Wickinsin gasped and turned to since at him. "Aro you n clairvoyant?"

"I might be, or I night be a maintime or anything else that would interest your renders, and you might be a reporter for the Express if you were not in fact the representative of tha Morning Star. Wint can I do in particular to oblige you at present?"

Wickinsin had forgatten all about Miss Inrker. "Well-cr-do you really possess these wonderful powers?"

"Whileht Hillocatiout Levitation? Perhaps."

"You might"—

John B. Gough, the famous temperance writer, was once in n New England town lecturing and after painting the tavern as a place of contamination even for the abstainer asked:

"Don't you all agree will me, friends, that there is no place a man should go and of which he should tell his molber and staters unless he might take them too there? Should there be any auch place?" relasing into a more comfortable attitude.

The Englishman laughed again.
"Well, perhaps your editar might lel

Whickham turned red and atammered. It was forme in upon him that the flus proof of Sprange's pretermatural powers was much too delicately personal to be mentioned to the city editor. As for putting it into print, that was unthinkuble.

The city editor sighed in wegry disappointment, looked all around the room and suffed.

A special difficulty has also been found in the attempt to place Mercury in the weighting scales. We can weigh the sun, the moon and even weigh the sun, the moon and even yield the sun, the moon and even Jupiter and other planets, but Mercury presents difficulties of a peculiar claracter. Le Verrier, however, succeeding the demonstrated that our earth is attracted by this planet, and he shows how the amount of ettraction early disclosed by deservation of the same other from an examination of the continuation of the mass of Mercury. If fortune drives the master forth an outtortune crives the master tortu an out-cast in the world, friendless and home-less, the faithful dog asks no higher privilege than that of accompanying him to guard against danger, to dight against his enemies. And when the last scene of all comes, and death takes the master its embrace, and his tody is isid to the cold ground, no matter if all other friends pursue their way, there by the grave side will the noide dog be found, lds head benirns down, is to give the owner aome will the notice dog be found, ids head becoming to build a new one. It is a good tween his paws, his eyes sad, but open in whert watchfulness, faithful and true even the first paws. slert watchfulness, faithful and true ever in death.

One of the most remarkable cases of cold, deep seated on the lungs, rausin meanmouts, is that of Mrs. Gertrade E Fenner, Marion, Ind., who was entirely cured by the use of One Minute Cough Cure. She says: "The coughing and atraining so weakened me that I run Lead and oil in the obli-fashion paint, attaining so weakened me that I run its to 22 pounds, thuseed oil: the test paint in the world: and the cheapest, because it takes fewer gallons than ulxed paints and it wears twice as long as lead and oil. Nobody wants poor paint; there's lots of it, though, in the world.

In one of our great public schools a master, known to successive generations of hie pupils for lifty years as "(old Biggus," delighted in surprising the boys with strange sayings and dologe. On one occasion, destrous of practically illustrating a question in the srithnestic lesson, he said to a toy:

"I am a tripe toerchant sud this platform is my shop. Will you come here and buy a pound of tripe? Now begin."

"(lease, I went a pound of tripe," said the boy, sauntering up.

"Where's your money?" demanded Did Biggus, hoping to put the buy out of constenance.

"Where's your tilpe?" was the real; retort; but it gained for its unfortunal author four hours' detention on the nex

. Cough Remady. last winter (the second one) I actually cored myself with one bottle of Chamber-Perry, Ediliar of the Eaterprise, Shorts-ville, N. V. "This is the honest truth-t at times kept from coughing myself to pieces by taking a traspoonful of this remedy, and when the congliding spell would come out of hight I would take a dose and it seemed that in the briefiest nterral the cough would pass off and would go to sleep perfectly free from cough and its accompanying poin. To say that the remedy neted as a most igreeable surprise is parling it very nibily. I lost no bles that it would o could knock out the grip, simply towars I had never tried it for such a purpose full it did, and it seemed with the secon stack of coughing the remedy caused stack of congning the remeny caused it to not only be of less duration, but the pulse were far less; severe, and I had not meel the contents of one bottle before Mr. Girlp had bid me adien."
